From the Editor’s Desk

MEDICAL STAFF AND THE HOSPITAL

A 1907 editorial in JAMA entitled The medical staff and the hospital noted: “The importance of hospitals to the community is now so universally acknowledged that it needs no comment; the organization of hospitals, on the other hand, and the proper relationship which should exist between the medical staff, the administrative officers and the public is a matter which has been treated in this country in far too haphazard a manner.” One hundred years later, in Australia in 2007, this relationship is even more “haphazard”.

Medical staff and other health professionals have been progressively side-lined in the management of hospitals. These are now mostly micromanaged by top-down structures more attuned to political whims than public wishes. It should be no surprise that this dysfunctional type of management has coincided with a time when our public hospitals have lurched from crisis to crisis.

The latest crisis involved a major metropolitan teaching hospital in New South Wales, when disregard of a patient having a miscarriage in the chaotic environs of a busy emergency department sparked media outrage and community dismay and disgust.

Within days, the media exposed other instances of perceived poor patient care, and the public’s already shaky confidence in their hospitals plummeted. In the ensuing blame game, it emerged that medical staff had been effectively pushed aside in the running of their hospitals.

It seems that hospital management has become the business of distant bureaucratic silos, populated by people obsessed with bottom lines, meetings and memoranda.

However, hospitals exist for the public, and for health professionals who seek to serve the community. Health professionals’ views about and contributions to the management of their hospitals must be acknowledged and actively sought. Undoubtedly, further bureaucratic failures to involve them in management decisions will perpetuate the crisis culture in our hospitals.

Martin B Van Der Weyden

LETTERS

High levels of cannabis use persist in Aboriginal communities in Arnhem Land, Northern Territory

K S Kylie Lee, Alan R Clough, Katherine M Conigrave

A national survey of medical morning handover report in Australian hospitals

Erwin Loh

Matthew J Fassett, Terry J Hannan, Iain K Robertson, Steven J Bollipo, Robert G Fassett

MIMS is not a stand-alone resource

James L Mallows

Matthew J Fassett, Terry J Hannan, Iain K Robertson, Steven J Bollipo, Robert G Fassett

International conferences on rare diseases: initiatives in commitment, patient care and connections

Yvonne A Zurynski, Katie N Reeve, Elizabeth J Elliott

Drowning and three-wheel strollers

Roger W Byard, Neil Matthews

Herpes compunctorum: cutaneous herpes simplex virus infection complicating tattooing

Catherine S Marshall, Felicity Murphy, Shannon E McCarthy, Allen C Cheng

Driving assessment and rehabilitation after stroke

Zoe A Allen, Julie Halbert, Lydia Huang

BOOK REVIEWS

Primary care in the twenty-first century: an international perspective reviewed by Justin J Beilby

Clinical thinking: evidence, communication and decision-making reviewed by Suzanne H McKenzie

Anaesthesia and the practice of medicine: historical perspectives reviewed by Mervyn D Cobcroft

SNAPSHOTS

Magnetic resonance imaging for paraneoplastic dermatomyositis

Daniele Torchia, Emiliano Antiga, Letizia Ricupero, Marzia Caproni, Paolo Fabbri

Arrhythmogenic left ventricular false tendon

Robin AP Weir, Henry J Dargie, Iain N Findlay

CORRECTION

September MJA BookClub Winners

Congratulations to our two September winners: Dr Clare Patterson, Bondi, NSW and Dr Viney Joshi, Blackall, QLD. Both have won a Triangular Personalised Name Plate from the MJA BookClub. To order your own personalised name plate, contact Julie Chappell on (02) 9562 6666. Thanks to everyone who purchased books from the September MJA BookClub and went into the draw. Pictured right is Patricia Wall, AMPCo’s Executive Secretary, drawing the September winners. To see this month’s MJA BookClub’s great offers, see page 585 and the inside back cover of this issue.